

Avoiding Sexual Harassment Allegations in Patient Care

Lunch & Learn Webinar
Friday, June 5th, 12:00 PM - 1:00 PM

OBJECTIVES

This webinar session will equip clinicians with practical strategies to prevent and address allegations of misconduct and sexual harassment in patient care. You will gain insight into best practices for maintaining professional boundaries, effective communication, and documentation. Special emphasis will be placed on the appropriate use of chaperones to protect both patients and staff. Attendees will leave with actionable guidance to foster a safe and respectful clinical environment.

Identify common situations and behaviors in patient care that may increase the risk of sexual harassment allegations and professional boundary concerns.

Apply best practices for maintaining professional boundaries, effective communication, and appropriate documentation during patient interaction.

Explain the role and proper use of chaperones in the clinical setting to promote patient comfort, provider protection, and compliance with organizational policies.

Peter D. Eidenberg, Partner, Keating, Jones & Hughes, PPC.

Peter has been with Keating, Jones & Hughes since September 2007, during this time, Peter has worked on a wide variety of medical malpractice cases, representing both institutional clients as well as individual practitioners. Peter has extensive experience as a defense attorney for medical providers and has represented physicians and hospitals in cases ranging from common medical liability cases to complex product liability claims involving medical device manufacturers.